Ricoh Multifunction Printers Support Apple's AirPrint

Enables Wireless Printing from iPad, iPhone, and iPod touch

Tokyo, September 24, 2012 – Ricoh Company, Ltd. (President and CEO: Shiro Kondo, hereinafter “RicoH”) today announced that some of its multifunction printers (MFPs) support AirPrint™, the native printing function offered by Apple¹.

This makes it possible for customers to print documents, photographs, images, and so forth directly from an iPad, iPhone, or iPod touch without installing a printer driver or an application.

Ricoh continues to expand its range of compatible MFPs and printers by further enhancing the compatibility with iOS devices.

¹ An upgrade of MFPs firmware may be necessary depending on the models.
